The primary focus of Swachh Bharat Abhiyan lies in improving the sanitation infrastructure across both rural and urban areas of the country. Prior to the launch of this campaign, India struggled with poor sanitation practices, particularly in rural areas, where open defecation was rampant.

Poor sanitation contributed to the spread of diseases, including cholera, diarrhea, and dysentery. With the launch of Swachh Bharat Abhiyan, the government made it a priority to provide every household with access to toilets, thus eradicating the harmful practice of open defecation.

The Swachh Bharat Mission (SBM) under this campaign works to provide funding and resources for building toilets in both urban and rural areas. The mission focuses on rural sanitation by providing grants to individuals and families to construct toilets in their homes.

Additionally, the government also supports the construction of public toilets in urban areas, ensuring that people have access to basic sanitation facilities. The program has succeeded in constructing millions of toilets across the country, with many rural areas achieving Open Defecation Free (ODF) status.

In addition to promoting sanitation, Swachh Bharat Abhiyan emphasizes waste management and the importance of waste segregation. Waste management is a critical challenge faced by India, especially in densely populated urban areas.

Despite these successes, challenges remain. Some regions still face issues with inadequate sanitation facilities, especially in remote and underserved areas.

Furthermore, the effective implementation of waste management systems continues to be a challenge in many urban areas. In addition, changing long-standing behavioral patterns and practices requires continuous awareness and education.

To make Swachh Bharat Abhiyan truly successful in the long term, it is essential to ensure sustainability.
